‘Most influential’ accolade for Guernsey lawyer

Davey Le Marquand, a partner at Carey Olsen has been named as one of Private Client Practitioner’s ‘50 Most Influential’.

The list details those working in the private client sector in the UK and is a significant endorsement from experts within the industry.

For its inaugural list Private Client Practitioner (PCP) made an open call for nominations and a shortlist was drawn up of those deemed to be at the forefront of shaping private client work. The criteria sought to identify practitioners who represent innovation and new ideas and who bring the best service to clients.

Advocate Le Marquand said the nomination was a credit to the hard work put in by the whole private client team at Carey Olsen.

“Obviously being mentioned in such a prominent list is very gratifying. Knowing that peers, colleagues and clients value the work you do is a great motivator. I also have to credit my colleagues for their support.”

PCP’s ‘most influential’ list features the most prominent practitioners in the private client sector. The shortlist is drawn up to reflect individual expertise in this field.

Deputy managing partner of Carey Olsen and head of the fiduciary law team, Russell Clark, said the news reflected Advocate Le Marquand’s growing reputation in this area.

“There is no doubt that Davey is a leading practitioner in this field in the Channel Islands, so it is good to see a UK wide publication like PCP recognising his work in a national context. It reflects well on us as a firm to have partners as well regarded as Davey as part of our partnership and his presence in this list reinforces our reputation as a market leader for private client work.”
