Tim is a partner and advocate in the dispute resolution group. He specialises in advisory and trial work with expertise in banking and financial services litigation, company law disputes and contentious corporate transactional matters, along with significant experience in the field of corporate insolvency and general commercial litigation. During his career he has appeared in matters before the English High Court, the Royal Court of Guernsey and the Guernsey Court of Appeal.

Tim's representative work, which often has an international / cross-border element, includes: fund and investor disputes; combating shareholder activism; litigation in relation to mis-selling and misrepresentation; merger and acquisition disputes; joint venture, shareholder and partnership disputes and petitions for unfair prejudice, including the first derivative action in Guernsey; regulatory investigations and representation; contentious and non-contentious schemes of arrangement; and disputed insolvency processes.

Tim also has experience across diverse commercial sectors, from professional negligence claims (accountants, law firms, administrators and custodians), regulatory investigations (financial services) to oil and gas disputes in Russia and the CIS. He has been involved in cases arising from the collapses of Enron, Lehman Brothers, the Icelandic Banks and Bernard L Madoff Investment Securities, LLC.

Tim also has a strong board advisory practice, assisting boards of directors (or committees or constituents thereof) on commercially sensitive investigations and transactions, including insurance coverage matters, as well as advising distressed corporates, directors and secured and unsecured creditors in formal cross-border and domestic restructuring and insolvency proceedings.

Tim's clients include major corporates, investment banks, hedge funds, private equity houses and other financial institutions, as well as investors, trustees, office holders and individuals. He is regularly instructed by magic circle, City of London and US law firms.
