Tim is a partner in Carey Olsen's British Virgin Islands (BVI) Dispute Resolution and Litigation team.

Tim previously worked for Carey Olsen in the BVI and rejoined the firm in December 2020 having been head of litigation at another offshore law firm.

Tim advises on a wide range of litigation and insolvency matters drawing on his broad onshore and offshore experience. He is a Solicitor Advocate and Barrister and regularly appears in Court.

Tim's recent work in the BVI has focused on cross-border fraud and asset tracing, and all forms corporate insolvency work, including liquidation. Tim has particular experience in acting for and against liquidators, in shareholder disputes and unfair prejudice petitions, trust disputes and fraud work, and complex multi-jurisdictional cases emanating especially from Russia/CIS and China. He is regularly instructed on an emergency basis in relation to interim remedies such as freezing injunctions, the appointment of receivers, and Norwich Pharmacal relief (third party disclosure orders).

Career

Tim studied Law at Cambridge University. He trained at Herbert Smith Freehills and qualified as a Solicitor in 2009, and subsequently as a Solicitor Advocate and Barrister (not currently practising in England and Wales). Prior to joining Carey Olsen in September 2016, Tim worked for another offshore firm, a major US firm and a boutique litigation firm in London. He was admitted to practice in the BVI in March 2015.

Aside from his usual commercial work, Tim has experience in Caribbean criminal appeals on a pro bono basis. He has taken two Jamaican murder appeals to full
